The UNITRACK Advantage

Why Kato UNITRACK is ideal for building both your permanent and temporary layouts

When it was first introduced to the Japanese model train market in 1957, Kato UNITRACK was revolutionary because it provided the convenience of a snap track with none of the drawbacks - the patented Unijoiner clips hold rails tightly together but are easily disconnected, allowing modelers to reliably assemble and disassemble their track sections over and over and over again, without worrying about loosening joints, breaking clips, or lessening the electrical conductivity between track segments!

While much in the hobby in the last 50 years has changed, Kato UNITRACK has remained THE ideal track system in both N and HO scales for modelers looking for reliability and ease of use; whether building fully detailed scenic layouts or temporary setups that can be operated around a christmas tree or a dining room table!

ACCESSORIES FOR HO GAUGE UNITRACK ONLY

~ Elegant in design and function ~

The Uni-joiner is the basis for Kato UNITRACK's worry-free design. A removable connector clip, the Uni-joiner can be replaced in the unfortunate event that a piece breaks or fails (unlike other snap tracks where the entire section will have to be replaced), and can be easily swapped out for wired uni-joiners or insulated uni-joiners for more advanced layout wiring techniques.

Kato UNITRACK uses a special alloy of nickel silver to prevent tarnishing and reduces the frequency of cleaning that is required. If you're an occasional modeler who only pulls out the train set on holidays, that means you don't need to worry about your rails rusting away in the package!
